In Washington, DC, the clock was twisted all the way back to 1998 after Scotland remained drawn in Group C together with Brazil, Morocco, two of our adversaries from our last Football World Cup entrance, and Haiti. Maybe it was fated to be this way. Maybe the stars and stripes had aligned. Certainly, once the groups had begun to take shape, there was a sensation of predictability to it all.

Scotland vs Morocco Tickets: Long Wait, Returning to the FIFA World Cup After 27 Years

As Paraguay, the Ivory Coast, and Tunisia were all chosen for Group C, only to be placed elsewhere because they couldn't go into the same group as a team from their confederation, you just knew that Scotland were going to slot right in there. And so echoes of Paris and Saint-Etienne abounded for the millions of Scots watching the draw on TV.
